(Bloomberg) -- Sempra LNG is in the process of lining up financing for its proposed Port Arthur LNG export project Texas “as we speak,” Jim Diemer, regional vice president of midstream commercial development, says during panel at the Gulf Coast Energy Forum in New Orleans.

* Co. has started site work for phase 1, which includes two trains with 11 mtpa of capacity: Diemer

* Sempra LNG is also “actively marketing” Port Arthur trains 3 & 4 for proposed expansion

* NOTE: Sempra has yet to reach a final investment decision on Port Arthur
